Emergency Medicine Hurley Medical Center

A 4-week block rotation in the PGY-1 year at the Hurley Medical Center with faculty and residents in the joint University of Michigan/St. Joseph Mercy Emergency Medicine Residency.

- Residents spend 5 hours weekly at Michigan State University for psychiatry seminars and individual supervision. Residents attend the Emergency Medicine lecture series for all residents participating in the rotation on a weekly basis.
- Residents will become familiar with common acute/emergent presentations of diseases and injuries and recognize life-threatening emergencies from medical, surgical, traumatic, psychiatric and obstetric presentations.
- The patient population treated parallels the community ratios with approximately 48% male, 52% female, 54% African American/Black, 30% White, 4% Hispanic and <1% Asian.
- Residents evaluate, manage and triage complex cases with the assistance of both senior residents and attending physicians. Opportunities for procedure experiences exist. An average emergency room patient load is 5-15 patients per day.
- All residents have required individual supervision once weekly with their psychiatry supervisor. All residents are required to staff and see each case with an Emergency Medicine attending physician or senior resident.
